The veterinarian is a rather important person in the collective farm. He has to make an inquest into the death of every animal, and assign responsibility for this death. If the death certificate shows that the death is due to the negligence of a certain person, this person will be punished with a couple years at hard labor.

The cows and horses on these collective farms are cared for better than those of the prison camps, since the former have stables and more specialists. Also, the people on these collective farms get a part of the harvest or production of milk and butter if they have exceeded their norm.

The first dairy farm was on the river Singa, the second on the river Kas-Yu, the third was on the river Hoshin, the fourth was on the river Usa, and the fifth was a combination dairy and reindeer farm near the fourth. Of course, the growing season is very short. From June to the middle of August there is almost one continual day, and everything grows very fast. After that, nothing grows. The farm supplied [redacted] the butter, milk, turnips and potatoes.
